

PETRIFIED WOOD

Petrified wood is a fossil. It forms when plant material is buried by sediment and protected from decay due to oxygen and organisms. Then, groundwater, rich in dissolved solids, flows through the sediment, replacing the original plant material with silica, calcite, pyrite, or another inorganic material such as opal.

Petrified wood is a wonderful grounding stone. It helps to calm scattered energies.

PETRIFIED WOOD

Petrified wood is a fossil. It forms when plant material is buried by sediment and protected from decay due to oxygen and organisms. Then, groundwater, rich in dissolved solids, flows through the sediment, replacing the original plant material with silica, calcite, pyrite, or another inorganic material such as opal.

Petrified wood is a wonderful grounding stone. It helps to calm scattered energies.

PETRIFIED WOOD

Petrified wood is a fossil. It forms when plant material is buried by sediment and protected from decay due to oxygen and organisms. Then, groundwater, rich in dissolved solids, flows through the sediment, replacing the original plant material with silica, calcite, pyrite, or another inorganic material such as opal.

Petrified wood is a wonderful grounding stone. It helps to calm scattered energies.

PETRIFIED WOOD

Petrified wood is a fossil. It forms when plant material is buried by sediment and protected from decay due to oxygen and organisms. Then, groundwater, rich in dissolved solids, flows through the sediment, replacing the original plant material with silica, calcite, pyrite, or another inorganic material such as opal.

Petrified wood is a wonderful grounding stone. It helps to calm scattered energies.

PETRIFIED WOOD

Petrified wood is a fossil. It forms when plant material is buried by sediment and protected from decay due to oxygen and organisms. Then, groundwater, rich in dissolved solids, flows through the sediment, replacing the original plant material with silica, calcite, pyrite, or another inorganic material such as opal.

Petrified wood is a wonderful grounding stone. It helps to calm scattered energies.

PETRIFIED WOOD

Petrified wood is a fossil. It forms when plant material is buried by sediment and protected from decay due to oxygen and organisms. Then, groundwater, rich in dissolved solids, flows through the sediment, replacing the original plant material with silica, calcite, pyrite, or another inorganic material such as opal.

Petrified wood is a wonderful grounding stone. It helps to calm scattered energies.